A Bibliography of the Catholic Hospital History Books in Canada

Back in 2003 when I was doing research for another book, A Compendium of the Catholic Health Association of Canada, I came across an old document listing the Catholic hospitals founded in Canada by the different congregations of women religious. It set me on a journey which has continued to this very day, some eighteen years later.

Initially I updated the original list which was compiled in 1949. Then I began to collect and to add historical books and booklets to the small collection in the office library. In time I started scanning and digitizing this collection. From the very beginning my hope was to digitize a 100 or so books that might represent the health care ministry of the Sisters in every province of Canada. But how does one go about searching for books when you do not have the title? At the time the world wide web was just beginning to become a burgeoning research tool.

Rather fortuitously, I discovered the bibliography, Histories of Canadian Hospitals and Schools of Nursing, created by David S. Crawford, FCLIP, Librarian Emeritus of McGill University. This discovery began a collaboration between David and myself that continues to this day. Not only did David research and compile a comprehensive and exhaustive bibliography of hospital history books (both public and faith-based), he also searched for (and continues to search for) printed copies of the books for deposit in the Osler Library of the History of Medicine at McGill University. The Osler Library is the de facto 'National Library of the History of Medicine for Canada.

See: <https://internatlbs.mcgill.ca/hospitals/hospital-histories.htm>

Because of David's monumental achievement, my task became easier. In searching for history books on Catholic hospitals and schools of nursing I need only refer to his bibliography. The Catholic Hospital Digital History Book Collection owes a debt to him, and because of that debt, the digital collection has grown to over 500 documents that are all available for viewing online. The following Bibliography of Catholic Hospital History Books in Canada is largely taken from the full bibliography compiled by David S. Crawford.

- All books and booklets in the following bibliography that appear in "black" are part of the digital collection and can be searched for online (www.chac.ca and click on "Resources").
- A book that appears in "blue" with a star [★] in front of it is a document that the collection has yet to find and digitize. Should you know of the whereabouts of such a document and wish to donate it to the collection please use the "Contact Us" link on the Catholic Health Alliance of Canada web site [www.chac.ca] to let me know.
- As well, should you know of a book or booklet about a Catholic Hospital or Catholic School of Nursing in Canada that does not appear in this bibliography, we would also appreciate that you contact us with that information.
